WALLED CITY OF INTRAMUROS

The colonial heart of Manila, Intramuros—which means “within the walls”—is the capital’s oldest district and home to some of its most impressive historic monuments.

Intramuros boasts of magnificent architectural works from churches to schools and government buildings. Today, this is the only district in Manila that has been successful in keeping its old Spanish-era look. The old walls still defend the district, keeping its churches and streets untouched by the winds of modernization. Ultimately, Intramuros is a story of Filipino resilience.
